- A. System Health
- B. Capacity
- C. Performance
- D. Configuration

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION: 2

Which of the following is a common physical network topology?

- A. Loopback
- B. Star
- C. Cross-over
- D. Straight

Answer: B

Explanation:

A star network consists of one central switch, hub or computer, which acts as a conduit to transmit messages. This consists of a central node, to which all other nodes are connected; this central node provides a common connection point for all nodes through a hub. In star topology, every node (computer workstation or any other peripheral) is connected to central node called hub or switch.

NEW QUESTION: 4

The main differences between a software process assessment and a software capability evaluation are:

A. Software process assessments are used to develop a risk profile for source selection; software capability evaluations are used to develop an action plan for continuous process improvement.

B. Software process assessments and software capability evaluations are essentially identical, and there are no major differences between the two.

C. Software process assessments determine the state of an organizations current software process and are used to gain support from within the organization for a software process improvement program; software capability evaluations are used to identify contractors who are qualified to develop software or to monitor the state of the software process in a current software project.

D. Software capability evaluations determine the state of an organizations current software process and are used to gain support from within the organization for a software process improvement program; software process assessments are used to identify contractors who are qualified to develop software or to monitor the state of the software process in a current software project.

Answer: C

Explanation:

The other answers are distracters. If, in answer "Software process assessments are used..." the terms software process assessments and software capability evaluations were interchanged, that result would also be correct. It would then read, Software capability evaluations are used to develop a risk profile for source selection; software process assessments are used to develop an action plan for continuous process improvement.
