NEW QUESTION: 1
Which of the following is an upgraded standard in connecting computers into a local area Network (LAN)?
A. Fast Ethernet
B. 10Base5
C. 10Base2
D. Token Ring
Answer: A

Explanation:
Fast Ethernet is a local area network (LAN) transmission standard that provides a data rate of 100 megabits per second (referred to as '100BaseT'). Workstations with an existing 10 megabit per second (10BaseT) Ethernet card can be connected to a Fast Ethernet network. Fast Ethernet is a collective term for a number of Ethernet standards that carry traffic at the nominal rate of 100 megabits per second, against the original Ethernet speed of 10 megabits per second. Answer option C is incorrect. A Token Ring network is a local area network (LAN) in which all computers are connected in a ring or star topology and a bit- or token-passing scheme is used in order to prevent the collision of data between two computers that want to send messages at the same time. The Token Ring protocol is the second most widely-used protocol on local area networks after Ethernet.
The IBM Token Ring protocol led to a standard version, specified as IEEE 802.5. Both protocols are used and are very similar. The IEEE 802.5 Token Ring technology provides for data transfer rates of either 4 or 16 megabits per second. Answer option D is incorrect. 10Base2 is a type of cable, also known as Thinnet Coax. The maximum length of a 10base2 cable network can be 185 meters.
10Base2 cable is used in Bus topology. 10Base2 network uses the British Naval Connector (BNC) along with the T connectors to connect to the LAN card. Answer option A is incorrect. 10Base5 is an IEEE standard for baseband Ethernet coaxial cable. It transfers data at 10Mbps, which can travel a maximum distance of 500 meters. 10Base5 is also known as thick Ethernet, ThickWire, and ThickNet.
The characteristics of 10Base5 are summarized in the table given below:
