When configuring a Cisco IPS custom signature, what type of signature engine must you use to block podcast clients from accessing the network?

- A. string TCP
- B. service HTTP
- C. service GENERIC
- D. fixed TCP
- E. service TCP

Answer: B

Explanation:

A signature micro-engine is a component of an IDS and IPS sensor that supports a group of signatures that are in a common category. Each engine is customized for the protocol and fields that it is designed to inspect and defines a set of legal parameters that have allowable ranges or sets of values. The signature micro-engines look for malicious activity in a specific protocol. Signatures can be defined for any of the supported signature micro-engines using the parameters offered by the supporting micro-engine. Packets are scanned by the micro-engines that understand the protocols contained in the packet.
